A Little Chutzpah in Learning

Dovid Kopel

I was just telling my wife that I don't remember who said this idea, but I love it. When learning Torah, you need a little chutzpah — not too much, but enough. You need to argue your point until proven otherwise: "No, I think this is the pshat!" — and hold your ground until you understand. You need to be a מבקש האמת (seeker of truth).

In the end, it's not your opinion that matters. It is what the אמת (truth) is. Most of the time, all מידות (character traits) have their place; they need to be expressed in the right way, at the right moment. Now we see that even chutzpah has its place.

May we all be זוכה to find the אמת in everything we learn, get inspired, and have that trickle down into our very essence! Keep shteiging!
